HOW DO WE USE YOUR INFORMATION?

The information you provide to us is typically necessary in order for us to enter into an agreement whereas other information that we collect from you or others often is required for other purposes. Our services are digital and therefore many decisions are made automatically based on such information. The following section outlines the reasons for our processing of your personal data as well as when decisions are made automatically. Qliro only processes your information to the extent we are legally entitled to do so. The legal basis for such processing is typically to perform our contract, or some other basis which is considered legitimate according to law.

To communicate with you

We have a legitimate interest to use the information to do customer satisfaction surveys and to send information and marketing regarding the services you use as well as other services offered by us, eg. by way of SMS, e-mail or regular post. We want to be relevant in our communication and therefore we adapt the communication to your profile. You may always request to be removed from all or some of such send-outs by contacting customer services (see below).

To perform, offer and improve our services

We use the information we collect to perform, offer and improve our services. In order to perform our contractual obligations to you to we need to (i) verify your identity as well as your personal- and contact details, (ii) administer the service you are using and your purchase, eg. a payment or provide you with information that you have requested from us regarding a product or service or otherwise perform our obligations to you, and (iii) ensure that content is presented the right way to you and the device you are using.

Our contractual obligations to you and other legitimate interests is the basis for our customer analysis and to administer our services, eg. troubleshooting, testing and statistical purposes. Our legitimate interests and legal obligations requires us to use your information to manage and analyse risk and to prevent fraud, eg. that an unauthorised person makes a purchase using your name.

We also need your information to determine what payment methods and other services we are able to offer to you, eg. by internal and external credit assessments, as well as for risk management and to prevent abuse of our services so we can keep them safe to use for you. We do this to comply with applicable law and regulation and to perform our obligations in our agreement with you.

In order to do this in an efficient and secure manner, and to be able to revert expediently and in a correct way, we sometimes make decisions automatically (ie. without direct interaction from any of our employees) based on such information. This notwithstanding and if you disagree with any such decision, you may still request a manual review.

Sometimes we are under a legal obligation to process your information. This is the case eg. to prevent money laundering, to comply with capital adequacy requirements and accounting rules. Additionally, we have a legitimate interest to use your information for general business development, eg. to develop products and applications.

WHO MAY ACCESS YOUR INFORMATION?

Qliro does not sell your information to other parties but we still need to share information with third parties as further set out below. When doing so we always take all reasonable technical, legal and organisational measures to ensure that your data is treated securely and with an adequate level of protection.

Merchants

The merchant selling the product or service that you purchase will receive such part of your information which is necessary to perform and administer your purchase, and to manage disputes. Such information will be processed by the merchant in accordance with the merchant's own data privacy guidelines.

Credit reference agencies and similar providers

We need to share and collect certain information from and with credit reference agencies and similar providers in order to assess your credit worthiness as well as to confirm your identity and address.

Suppliers and subcontractors

Certain suppliers and subcontractors (eg. financing partners, e-mail-, printing and logistical companies) may need access to parts of your information in order for us to perform our contractual obligations to you, and for the other purposes set out in this policy.

Government bodies

Certain authorities, eg. tax agencies and the Police, require us to share information. An example of when we are legally obliged to share information is to prevent money laundering and terrorist financing.

Disposals

If Qliro purchases or sells assets or businesses, or if Qliro itself (or parts thereof) is sold, the buyer or seller (as applicable) may get access to your information.

WHERE DO WE STORE YOUR INFORMATION?

All information collected by us is generally stored within EU/EEA, however sometimes information is stored by us or our suppliers or subcontractors outside of EU/EEA. In those cases, we will apply such security measures which are in compliance with applicable law to ensure a secure transfer of data. This means that your information will be managed in a secure manner also in these cases, and in line with the level of protection which apply within EU/EEA.

FOR HOW LONG DO WE PROCESS YOUR INFORMATION?

We will only process your information for as long as we are required to do so according to law or have a legitimate interest to do so, or to the extent required to perform our contractual obligations to you.

YOUR RIGHTS: RECTIFICATION, ERASURE AND ACCESS TO INFORMATION

You have a number of rights according to law in relation to your information. Set out below is a brief introduction to some of these rights.

Rectification and limitation of information

You have the right to have your information amended if you are of the view that your information which we process is incorrect or incomplete. You may also in certain cases request that our access to your information is limited, eg. until we have amended your information as per your request.

Right to erasure

You may request that information is deleted when it is no longer required for a legitimate purpose. However, some information needs to be kept by us according to law and/or regulation. Such obligations to retain your data follows from laws regarding general banking, money laundering, accounting and tax but also from consumer protection regulations. In those cases, we will limit our access to the information so that it may only be used to comply with these obligations.

Right of access

You have a right to request a copy of your personal data as held by us. There is also a possibility to request access to such personal data in a machine-readable format in order to transfer such data to another data processor (data portability).
